I present to you: Evan and Margo McGann, wed on 6/17. Evan and Margo are another success story from FHOP. They met while Evan lived there. They fixed me dinners!

On June 27th, as I drove home from Tufts, torrential downpours and quarter inch hail pounded my car! It was such a powerful display of God's might and what He can do.

I got a job shuttling cars around at Enterprise Rent-a-Car: the easiest job I've ever had. No stress for spending money.

The fourth of July brought our family together, all 18 of us! We even snapped a few photos of us in JJ's backyard. So fun.

I enjoyed Summer Solstice this year: June 21st, the longest day of the year. It always reminds me of my friend, Joe Magdalenski, who sent me on a flight to Alaska during Summer Solstice 2010. Joe loves summer and loves to hike. I've been jogging with the ConnectingPoint Couch to 5K. It's tons of fun. For Summer Solstice, we ran the Wayside Run for Fun 5K in Marlborough. The course was hard, with four hills, but after the race, there were free burgers and dogs, sodas, beer and cotton candy! It was so fun hanging out with the other runners in our group. We caroused until the sun went down. It was the perfect day: I felt so loved. I've also gone on two hikes: Mt. Wachusett and Redemption Rock.

I am proud to present this batch of cartoons. I drew them all and published this Etoonin' in just two days! I prayed a lot for the cartoons, and Jesus blessed me with the creativity. I recognize that my talent comes from God and I am thankful. I always hope for cartoon fame, but it goes at God's pace. Fame, for a cartoonist, is somewhat anonymous: most people don't know what their favorite cartoonists look like. I also hope I'll earn money cartooning, but it seems unlikely. I have an audience of 10 or 20. I wonder how cartoonists deal with the decrease in newspapers. My best shot is to draw unique, creative, well drawn cartoons that capture the complexity of life with jokes that you can like + share.
