The Secret to My Success...

Part of being a good Cartoonist is knowing how to plagiarize without making it obvious. A lot of my ideas come from things other people have said or done (or drawn). This issue draws inspiration from Calvin & Hobbes, Max Lucado, and, maybe it is obvious, but I pilfer a lot from the Bible. I do that to edjumatate you, just in case you don't know the blessings of God's Word. Some of my most favorite songs use lyrics from the Bible. I could compile a Spotify playlist if you like. My goal, with these cartoons, is to provide you with entertainment that keeps you coming back. Etooinin' is suffering from a lack of interest, and that's my fault. But with Jesus, we will correct that. Any good service sells not for self-interest, but to bless the buyer. My mistake the last few years is cartoons about me without providing the funny. Actually, the goal of Etooinin' was best described by ChatGPT: a publication that combines solid theology with wit. A bit of teaching with a liberal dose of humor. Many generous benefactors keep Etooinin' afloat, but my goal is to amass an audience. This requires more than I can handle, so I've asked Jesus for help. He makes cartooning fun. I want to amass an audience and provide ways to invest if people are blessed. A paid Substack subscription is a start. I want my cartoons to remain free, but with the option to pay. This is the Daniel LaBelle model. I would need 1,000 paid subscribers to fund my life. Out of a nation with 210 million Christians, it is possible. Please consider praying for me: for creativity. And, if you enjoy the cartoons, please share them with others. God loves you, and I do too! Love, humor, and God: what could be better? Together with God, we toon in'...
